OPENING OF SCHOOL
THANK YOU

Thank you to all for your efforts to welcome children to school the past few weeks. The opening of school has gone smoothly despite a few days with high temperatures and humidity. We appreciate the efforts of everyone, staff and students, to start the year off well. Additionally, I appreciated the warm feedback I received from everyone after the general assembly meeting. I was pleased that so many of you enjoyed DeWitt Jones’ film.

I recognize we are just weeks into the school year, but I would like to remind you of four key messages:

- Have fun
- Enjoy the children
- Enjoy one another
- Enjoy the journey

Keep up the good work and thank you for your dedication on behalf of our learners.

FOCUS ON COLLABORATIVE TEAMS

Rick DuFour is one of the key proponents of Professional Learning Communities and has written widely on this topic. DuFour notes: “The power of PLCs lies in a cyclical process of collective inquiry that results in a guaranteed curriculum, careful monitoring of student learning, timely and systematic intervention and enrichment and collective analysis of student learning to improve the individual and collective practice of the team.” This quote illustrates the holistic nature of implementing effective PLCs.

A key goal for the year is to have individual teams examine student performance data and set SMART goals. Later, we will more broadly publish the goals and report out the results. We have asked building principals to share the work of grade level, content area or K-12 teams as the year moves along. As I shared with you on opening day, the effort this year is to get to scale with this strategy and develop internal accountability as a district.

Of course, as DuFour notes: “we learn by doing and making adjustments as we go.” This year we are interested to learn of the successes and new learning as we go through full implementation. Each year, we will become more and more proficient at the PLC process and teams will deepen their understanding of the cyclical nature of the strategy.

Characteristics of Professional Learning Community

- Focus on learning, rather than teaching
- Data inquiry
- Collaborative
- Professional Development where most needed as revealed by data about learning
- Accountable for results

“If we are facing in the right direction, all we have to do is keep walking”
- Buddhist saying

CELEBRATE the RIGHT with WEB DeWitt Jones
As you may already know, the School Board has been working to establish goals for the 2015-16 year. One key goal is implementing the Professional Growth and Evaluation (PG&E) system. By late spring 2016, we expect 100% of teachers will respond that they had 6-8 mini-observations and an evaluation against Marshall’s domains conducted by their administrator. The second goal will be to get to scale with professional learning communities across the six schools where teacher teams look at performance data and set a SMART goal for the grade level, content area or K-12 team. Again, later in the year, all teams will have faithfully gone through the process and can share results of our efforts on behalf of students.

Over the next six weeks, I will visit each of the schools for a day and make myself available to meet with staff to solicit your input in order to complete my entry plan. In advance of our meeting, I would ask participants to complete two (2) forms that are available on the RSU 5 website as part of my entry plan.

Cultural Norms Inquiry
 expectations of the Superintendent

Staff are invited to participate; I certainly understand if you are unable to meet on that day.

Small groups will be asked to share what they see as the strengths of RSU5 as well as current and future opportunities. I hope you can find time in your schedule to participate in this process.

I will also be going to school PTO/PTC/PTA meetings to solicit feedback and will offer folks the opportunity to respond via an online survey as well.

I look forward to meeting you all.
Board member has her heart set on micromanaging

Meddlesome, power-hungry board members who want to manage the schools are rare. But when you have one on your board, they can be real misery-makers.

A Texas board has one member who wants to assign work to employees, monitor the superintendent's work daily, and sit on staff committees to "direct" staff work. The board member gets very unpleasant when she does not get her way.

The board has to accept responsibility for the problem this individual is creating. If she wants to run the district, then that is what she will do if the board can't control her.

To date, this superintendent and board have addressed this issue through various methods — none of which have worked.

The methods tried include: having board members speak to the problem member one-on-one; enlisting the board's attorney to speak with the member; pointing out the authority to manage staff detailed in the administrator's contract; and bringing in the state school boards' association to work through the problem.

Before you let voters fix the problem, the board may want to attempt three final strategies.

1. Point out the board member will likely have the opposite effect of her intended result. No staff member on a committee will want to go against a board member's vote. Many people may wait until they are sure of the board member's perspective, and then "go along to get along." In the end, you are left with school employees who aren't doing their best work for the schools.

2. Just do the board's work. The full board, by conducting its business without this trustee's support, may relegate the individual to a frustrated minority. By doing this, you also let the public see the board's business being conducted with a lone dissenting vote from an obstructionist.

3. Ask that every item the board member requests from staff be provided to the full board. This should be a paper-wasting reminder to all board members that requesting reports from staff, giving them direction, and managing projects cannot be considered part of any board member's official capacity unless specifically authorized by the board itself. This board member is overstepping the bounds of an individual board member's authority. It is up to the full board to do something about it.

Should the superintendent bring the board multiple recommendations for a new principal?

Given their druthers, there are some board members who would like the superintendent to present the board with three viable candidates for any principal opening in the district. Then, the board would pick.

But that is not how hiring a new administrator should work. Remember, the superintendent is responsible for personnel management in the district, and that includes hiring staff. Here is how the hiring of principals should work in practice:

The superintendent (and her staff) interviews candidates and then brings to the board his recommendation for the new principal. The board either approves it or votes the recommendation down.

If the board votes down the superintendent's recommendation, the superintendent's job then becomes bringing the board another recommendation for a new principal at a later meeting.
Absent state action, unsuccessful board candidate’s 1st Amend. claims stall

Ruling: The U.S. District Court, Southern District of New York granted a district’s motion to dismiss a school board candidate’s First Amendment retaliation claims. It concluded that there was no state action linking a candidate’s speech on school-related issues to her unsuccessful run for a seat on the board.

What it means: A district may violate the First Amendment by retaliating against private citizens who speak out on matters of public concern. However, unless there is specific evidence that district employees, in their official capacities, took adverse action with retaliatory intent, courts are unlikely to view campaign speech that “retaliates” against campaign speech as a violation of the First Amendment. Here, an unsuccessful candidate for the district’s board of education did not offer “a single fact” to support her claim that an alleged “smear campaign” aimed at thwarting her election bid was connected to district employees or board members.

The board has 4 responsibilities to the district

Within your board’s policymaking role, there is one area of responsibility that the board should keep at a high priority level: an effective working relationship with the superintendent. The board hires, supervises, evaluates, and, if necessary, fires the superintendent.

The board’s first responsibility, and some say the most important one, is to hire a competent administrator to run the district by managing all aspects of its day-to-day affairs. The superintendent works for the board of education, while all other district employees work for the superintendent.

By hiring a superintendent, you are adding a competent education professional to your board team. Most board members have little inclination, not to mention the time, necessary to manage the day-to-day business of the district. By hiring and then supporting a professional who keeps things running smoothly, you ensure that the district is well managed and in a position to fulfill its mission. That’s why the board should manage this relationship effectively. Do this by:

- Respecting the superintendent’s authority as outlined in his contract and job description.
- Respecting the administrator as a professional.
- Not engaging in back channels of communication with school staff.
- Evaluating the superintendent each year.
- Giving him goals to achieve each year.

Exercise caution when tempted to cut off public input

Should the school board ever cut off public input at the board meeting? It depends. Generally speaking, the board should never interrupt a calm, well-organized speaker to move that the meeting be adjourned or to call for a vote.

On the other hand, the board’s meetings are public meetings, not meetings run by the public. If public input is turning into a melee, the board president should call for order and end public input.

When necessary, the board also has the right to suspend public input on an issue until a later meeting. This would occur when a meeting runs late and board members want to avoid making a hasty decision.

Consider a policy that explains the board’s intentions about ending public input. Sample language could read, “The board does not begin consideration of any new item of business during any regular meeting after 11 p.m. In the event the board is unable to complete its business items due to this time limitation, the meeting shall recess until the following evening.”

How do you stack up on board ‘culture’?

The Michigan Association of School Boards in its Indicators of Effective Boards and Board Members provides these observations about positive board culture and conduct at meetings. Board members should:

- “Value differences of opinion and don’t let differences degenerate into personality conflicts.”
- “Focus the board agenda and meeting on issues related to improving student achievement.”
- “Publicly support the superintendent and staff.”
- “Seek to build consensus and an environment of trust and respect among their fellow board members.”

RSU 5 School Board Operating Protocol

In order to enhance teamwork between the board and administration, we the members of the board and superintendent do hereby commit ourselves collectively and individually to the following operating protocol:

1. Children’s interests come first. The board will represent the needs and interests of all the children in RSU5.

2. No surprises. We agree to not spring surprises on other board members or the superintendent. There should be no surprises at board meetings. We agree to ask the chair or superintendent to place an item on the agenda instead of raising it unexpectedly at a meeting. The superintendent will keep the full board apprised on all matters ahead of meetings. Board members will receive all materials related to agenda items well in advance of a board meeting.

3. Follow the chain of command. The last stop, not the first, will be the board. We agree to follow the chain of command and insist others do so. While board member are eager to listen to constituents and staff, each inquiry is to be referred to the person who can handle most properly and expeditiously address it. All personnel complaints and criticism received by the board or its individual members will be directed to the superintendent.

4. Communicate openly and respectfully. When communicating about board matters be respectful of the Board. When communicating individual viewpoints, use caution not to undermine the implementation or intention of the majority vote. Be clear when speaking and clarify when you are speaking as a private citizen, as an individual, board member or on behalf of the board. Communication between staff and the board is encouraged as long as it follows policy. The superintendent recognizes that timely and open communication regarding school issues is important.

5. State goals, clearly. The board and superintendent will set clear goals for improving district performance and will monitor progress regularly.

6. Annually conduct a self-assessment / evaluation. The board will address its performance on an annual basis and address any issues.

7. Meeting protocol. Conduct at a board meeting is very important. We desire to have a legacy of a well functioning board. We agree to avoid words and actions that create a negative impression of an individual, the board or district. The Board will deeply listen to all speakers / presenters. We agree that we can disagree and will do so using common courtesy and respect for others.

8. Board acts only as a body. Individual board members do not have authority. On the board as a whole has authority. We agree that individual board members will not take unilateral action. Requests for information by a board member will be shared with all members.

9. Executive sessions only for appropriate subjects. The board will hold sessions only when the need arises. Board members will be extremely sensitive to the legal ramifications of their meetings and comments.

10. Avoid marathon meetings. To be efficient and effective, long board meetings should be avoided. Points can be made in a few words as possible and speeches at meetings will be minimal. If a board member believes s/he doesn’t have enough information or has questions, you should call the Superintendent or Board Chair before the meeting.

11. Practice efficient decision-making. Business meetings are for decision-making, action and votes. We agree to move the question when discussion is repetitive.

Purpose of the MSBA Delegate Assembly

Governance and policy decisions affecting MSBA are dealt with at the Delegate Assembly. The importance of each School Board being represented at the Delegate Assembly cannot be overstated. The following information about the Delegate Assembly is to inform your School Board of the importance of electing a delegate.

According to Article VIII of the Constitution, the Delegate Assembly is the policy making body of the Association. The Delegate Assembly has four specific powers.

1. It adopts resolutions that express the beliefs and purposes of the Association.

2. It transacts such other business as presented to it prior to the opening of the Delegate Assembly by any delegation or the Executive Board of Directors.

3. It elects the Officers and Executive Board of Directors.

4. It may adopt amendments to the Constitution.

According to Article V of the Constitution, the Association is governed by the Executive Board of Directors. The Board is comprised of Regional Directors and At-Large Directors.

The Delegate Assembly consists of one voting delegate for each member district. In order to be an official delegate the member School Board must report the name of the elected delegate and alternate prior to the Assembly. (See Delegate Form for actual date.)

The resolutions adopted at the Delegate Assembly are an expression of the Assembly’s views regarding various issues. The body of resolutions adopted by the Assembly defines the Association’s position on various legislative proposals.

As the Officers and Board of Directors approach any legislative session, it is crucial that they represent the Association’s members. Make your local Board’s voice heard and send a delegate to the MSBA Delegate Assembly held during the MSMA Annual Fall Conference on October 22, 2015.
